From Wednesday, April 25. to Saturday, April 28. 1711.

trym. HAN'T you obſerv'd our Friend Abel's Kindneſs to the Elector of Hanover, in the Poſt-Boy of the 24th, Maſter?

Prithee, Roger, thou know'ſt I don't care look upon that Common-ſhoar of Folly and : Tell me what he ſays of that Great Countrym. I own, Maſter, that the Tool him- worth no body's Regard; but as he is one Mouths of the Party, and employ'd by to trumpet their Falſhoods thro the Nation, erves your Notice now and then: and I am ou will think the Paſſage I am to tell you is of ſome Remarks.

his Paragraph from the Hague he ſays, le the Elector of Hanover's Miniſter is ing a Diſcourſe here concerning the Affair ildeſheim, tending to lay open the manifeſt ation as well of the Treaty of Weſtphalia, divers other Agreements; the Emperor by Miniſters aſſerted, That that Elector's man- of proceeding was directly contrary to the ect that is due to the Imperial Dignity. e Miniſters added, that the King of Pruſſia d to have a deſign to keep back, upon this unt, the Recruits that are ſo much wanted mpleat his Troops in Italy. That more- the Elector Palatine was entirely of opinion one can look upon this ſeizing of Hilde- no otherwiſe than as a Beginning of a Re- us War. Wherefore his Imperial Majeſty os'd to this State, that to prevent the ill equences which this Affair might be of to Common Cauſe, inaſmuch as ſeveral neigh- ing Princes and States of the Empire might againſt the Houſe of Brunſwick, his Electo- Highneſs of Hanover ſhould withdraw his es out of that Biſhoprick. Having thus re- d it to its former Liberty, his Imperial eſty promis'd to do impartial Juſtice, and oblige the Chapter to fulfil the Treaty of phalia, and other mutual Contracts; and in uance of that Treaty, in no wiſe to moleſt e of the Proteſtant Religion. Farther, that Elector might ſend back his Troops thither, aſe the ſame ſhould not be executed as it t, and that within a reaſonable time. Even land ſeems to have taken it amiſs, that at time of day Men have come to ſuch Extre-s.' That's the Paragraph, Maſter, pray e your opinion of it.

'Tis a Paragraph very becoming Wiſe Abel, e Party that employs him, Roger. I never life ſaw a greater Complication of Malice, adiction and Ignorance. Perhaps Abel may a Letter from the Hague for his Voucher; at's no Excuſe for libelling a Prince ſo nearly d to our Crown, and upon whoſe Family, next to her Majeſty, the Security of our Religion and Liberty depends under God. That matter has been ſet in ſo clear a light, and the Elector's Proceedings ſo fully juſtify'd by his own Manifeſto taken notice of by the other publick Papers, that nothing but inveterate Malice againſt that Illuſtrious Family, and Hatred to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, could have prompted Abel, and thoſe who ſet him at work to beſpatter the Elector of Hanover at ſuch a rate; for here he is charg'd with no leſs a Crime than Rebellion againſt the Emperor and Empire, and beginning a Religious War to obſtruct the Progreſs of the Confederates, and by conſequence to give the French King an opportunity to enſlave all Europe, and hinder the Elector's own Succeſſion to the Crown of Great Britain after the Death of her Majeſty and his own Mother. A Conduct ſo directly oppoſite to the Elector's known Juſtice and Wiſdom, that were it not for the Malice of Abel and the Party that employs him, the Story deſerves no other regard than to be laugh'd at, 'tis ſo fooliſh: It diſcovers however the Spirit of the Faction. Abel would do well to tell us, who it is in England, that take the Elector's Proceedings ſo much amiſs, and charge him with coming to ſuch unſeaſonable Extremitys. None ſure but thoſe who call the queſtioning of our Britiſh Jacobites for their Practices againſt the Government, a Perſecution of the Church. We know well enough who it is that damn King William's Memory for the curs'd Legacy of the Hanover Succeſſion he has left us; and honeſt Abel falls heartily in with them, by repreſenting the Elector as a Rebel and Perſecutor. So the Faction reprefented his Grandfather the Elector Palatine, and intoxicated his Father-in-Law King James ſo far with their ridiculous Notions of Paſſive Obedience, becauſe that brave Prince ſtood up for the German Liberties and the Proteſtant Religion againſt the High-Church of Rome, that his own Daughter the Electreſs Palatine and her Children were ſo far abandon'd, as to be reduc'd to live upon the Charity of others, and the Family entirely deſpoil'd of their Dominions and Dignity, till they were reſtor'd to part of 'em again by the Treaty of Weſtphalia. This alone is ſufficient, Roger, to juſtify the Elector of Hanover's Care, that there be no Infractions made upon that Treaty, eſpecially by a parcel of hot headed Prieſts in the middle of his own Dominions; and inſtead of any body's taking it amiſs in England, certainly every true Proteſtant muſt rejoice at the thoughts of our Succeſſion's being ſettled on ſuch a zealous Proteſtant Family. But alas! 'tis a Crime with Abel and his Suborners to ſtop the Perſecution of High-Church: that ſmells ſo rank of the ſo much decry'd Moderation, as is enough to give the Faction a Diſguſt at the Elector. It looks ſo like her Majeſty's Conduct of keeping the Tole-

Toleration inviolable, as is ſufficient to fill High-Church with the diſmal Apprehenſions of being for ever depriv'd of their perſecuting Power, which formerly brought us under Popery and Slavery, if the Family of Hanover come to the Crown.

Countrym. Had that ſilly Wretch been poſſeſs'd of a mouth-full of Senſe, he wou'd have conſider'd how inconſiſtent his libelling the Elector is with the pretended Zeal of his Party for the Family in their Addreſſes, by which Abel has got ſo good a Penny; but Nature will diſcover it ſelf. Enough of this dirty Subject, Maſter. Let's now talk a little with the other Implement of the Faction, the Examiner: He is in ſuch a terrible Fit of the Hippo, that he wants a Cordial. What pity 'twas that he cou'd not have an opportunity of taking a chirupping Cup with his Friends at Stationers-Hall on the Chevalier de St. George's day, to waſh away the Sorrow that has ſunk ſo deep in his Heart for the Conduct of the Whigs, who reſcu'd the Bank and Eaſt-India Company out of their devouring Jaws about a Fortnight ago. Do you obſerve what a rueful Outcry the poor Man makes, that the Affairs of his Party are perplex'd, nay almoſt deſperate, becauſe the Whigs have given a convincing Proof to the Nation that moſt of the Mony and Trade is in their hands, and that Sacheverel and his Mob miſcarry'd in their Act of Reſumption to get it from them. What great pity 'twas that their Tool could not have an opportunity to boaſt, that he had cut thro the Bank and the Eaſt India Company, as well as thro the late Parliament and Miniſtry.

Obſ. I do obſerve, Roger, that the Examiner ſings de Profundis for that ſad Accident; therefore, out of Compaſſion, I will put him in a way to retrieve the Loſs; which is, that Abel's Welſh Gentry, who have enter'd into a Bond not to trade with the Whigs, ſhou'd uſe their Endeavours to get an Act, ſuch as thoſe of their Mother High-Church, Rev. 13. 17. That no Man ſhall buy or ſell, ſave he that has the Mark or the Name of the Beaſt, or the Number of his Name; and that the Law may be effectual, and put in due execution. Let Sacheverel be made Maſter of the Stamp-Office, and if any body offer to counterfeit the Stamps, let his ſupreme Paſtors thunder out their Anathema's, and ſend theſe falſe Brethren to the Lake that burns with Fire and Brimſtone.

Countrym. A noble Expedient, Maſter: The Examiner and the Doctor are mightily oblig'd to you. Henry is the beſt qualify'd Man in the World for ſuch an Imployment, as may be ſeen by his Vindication, where he ſtrenuouſly defends the Practice of Abel's Welſh Gentry, and charges the other Genuine Sons of the Church with ſtupid Inadvertency, becauſe they don't follow the commendable Example; yet he is ſo ſtupid himſelf, that he has ventur'd 500 l. among the Whig Bankers! O rare Henry! I'll certainly ſpeak to his Brother-Oculiſt Sir William Read to couch the Cataracts on his Eyes, and cut off the Wen, which makes the Neck of his Underſtanding look ſo much a-wry, that all the Lines he draws run parallel from the Circumference to the Center.

Obſ. You know, Roger, that a certain High-Church Aſtronomer, in a Lecture upon that Subject to honeſt and wiſe Sir S———l, told him, That when Comets don't move within their Sphere, they grow excentrick, and burſt their Orbs. I am afraid Henry has ſome ſuch Fate attending him, which threatens the Downfal of the bright Ornaments of his High-Church. I know no other way to prevent it, but the raiſing of new Mobs to force her Majeſty to eat in her words from the Throne, againſt making Peace with France without the entire Reſtitution of Spain, and to impeach the late Parliament for making an Addreſs of Nature to her Majeſty. The Examiner has that Subject ſo brightly in his laſt Paper, that there is no Man alive ſo fit to draw up the Impeachment; and I hope he will not forget this Article, that thoſe who adviſ'd her Majeſty to inſiſt upon the demoliſhing of Dunkirk, deſerve the ſame Puniſhment; becauſe the ſelling of that place to the French King was one of the brighteſt Ornaments of a late Tory-Reign; and together with ſending Lewis XIV. the Models of our beſt Ships of War, and furniſhing him with Naval Stores, was a very neceſſary Precaution to incourage Trade, and keep the Sovereignty of the Sea. But above all things, let not the Examiner forget this Aggravation of the Addreſſers Crime, that they ſhould offer to talk of demoliſhing a Place where Prince Oglethorp imbark'd to inrich us with a Cargo of French Religion and Government.

Countrym. 'Tis very neceſſary, according to the Scheme of the Faction, Maſter, to ſink the Landing and Mony'd Intereſt, ſo as they may be able to cope with the Landed Intereſt; but I don't wonder at the Examiner's being for leaving Spain and the Weſt-Indies in the hands of the French. Our Trade with that Nation was formerly very great, and we had our Bullion from the Weſt-Indies. 'Tis certainly then the beſt way to humble the Bank and the Eaſt-India Company, and to be reveng'd on them for perplexing the Affairs of the Examiner's Friends, and making them almoſt deſperate, to let the French have all that Trade and Bullion, by keeping the Popiſh Monarchy; for if it be reſtor'd to K. Charles, he is under ſuch Obligations to Great Britain, that 'tis probable he will give us greater Conceſſions in Trade than any of his Predeceſſors: and thus will enrich the Whigs to ſuch a degree, and fill their Pockets ſo with Mony, that perhaps in time they may get the Land as well as the Trading Intereſt, from which Danger, Libera nos, Domine, is a Petition in the Examiner's Litany.

Obſ. Pray, Roger, ſpeak to your Friend William Read to take the Pins and Webs out of the Examiner's Eyes, and adviſe the Queen's Friends to make the Acts of Parliament in a larger and fairer Character, that the Examiner may be able to read them; for he tells us, that the Parliament which began the Rebellion againſt King Charles I. voted his Tryal, and appointed his Murderers; whereas the Act for attainting thoſe Murderers tells us, they could not effect the Murder till they had ſubverted the very Being and Conſtitution of the Parliament, ſeiz'd the Houſe of Commons, ſecluded and impriſon'd ſome Members, and forc'd others, and left nothing but a ſmall Remnant of their own Creatures; and that the Parliament was ſo far from voting his Tryal, and appointing his Murderers, that they voted the King's Conceſſion a Ground for Peace.

Countrym. Alas, poor Abel is undone! The Examiner has got the Chair from him, and will keep it for ever.

Thurſday, April 26. 1711.

London, April 26.

rday arriv'd the Mails from Holland and Flanders of Friday laſt.

the Amſterdam Gazette, dated May 1.

Turin, April 15.

Procauſa, Secretary to our Duke, is arrived here from Vienna, with the Inveſtiture of divers Imperial Fees that are made over to his Royal Highneſs; and the Earl of Peterborough is ſhortly expected, with the Inveſtiture of Sevano. They write from Genoa, that the Embarkation of the Troops at Vado is continued, and 'twas hoped Admiral Norris might ſail by the Inſtant for Barcelona.

From the Hague Courant, dated May 1.

Vienna, April 18. The Emperour's Sickneſs began on the 15th Inſtant to be not at all dangerous. Prince Eugene of Savoy made ready to ſet out for the Netherlands. He had deſired to have Audience of Leave of his Imperial Majeſty, but could not get it, ſaying, that the Prince having not had the Small-Pox ought to be kept out of the Hazard of Infection for them. A little before his Departure, his Highneſs renew'd his Requeſt to be admitted to the Audience, but was again refus'd; ſo that the 16th in the Morning Break he went away, having remitted all Affairs of the Aulick Council of War into the Hands of Count Herberſtein Vice-Preſident of that Council. The 16th in the Evening the Emperour ſudden grew very bad: The next Morning the Office of the Church for Perſons in Extremity were ſaid to him; a little after 10 a Clock the Confeſſor was call'd to give him the laſt Benediction, and preſently after he expired; aged 32 Years 7 Months 3 Weeks and 2 Days, in the 22d Year of his Roman, the 24th of his Hungarian, and the 7th of his Bohemian Reign. The Grief for his Death very great, not only at Court but among the People; and 'tis incredible with what Earneſtneſs they crowded every Day to the Churches during his Sickneſs, to pray for his Recovery. His Majeſty died without making a Will, it not being expected his Death was ſo nigh. The old Empreſs Dowager has taken upon her (as Guardian of the Archducheſſes in their Minority) the Regency of the Hereditary Countries, and alſo the Direction chiefly of foreign Affairs; and 'tis hoped that the Archduches, after having eſtabliſh'd neceſſary Orders in Catalonia, will come hither. The Royal Poſtmaſter General the Marquis de Lofrano, went by Poſt Yeſterday for Milan, whence ſome believe will proceed to Barcelona to acquaint his Catholick Majeſty with the Emperour's Deceaſe.

From the Amſterdam Courant, dated May 2.

Vienna, April 23. On Sunday laſt came the News of the Emperour's Death, by which the Dyet was ſurpriſed: But at the Inſtance of the Deputy of the Elector of Mentz the other Deputies aſſembled on Monday and Tueſday following as uſual; and repreſented to them, how neceſſary it was for the Eſtates of the Empire, upon this unhappy Occaſion of the Death of their Head the Father of their Country, ſhould hold together in Unity and Concord; that they the Deputies therefore, tho' not the Emperour, would do well to continue and conſult what might be beſt for the general Good, and ſend the Reſult of their Conſultations to their Principals, till they ſhould hear what the Elector Palatine and of Saxony would do as Vicars of the Empire: And that the chief Aim of their Conſultations, ought to be the electing a new Emperour as ſpeedily as poſſible in this dangerous Juncture. The Cardinal de Lamberg ſaid, that his Commiſſion as principal Commiſſioner of the Dyet be now void, he would as a true Member of the Empire contribute all he could by his Counſels to the common Intereſt. The Deputy of the Elector of Mentz, as Director of the Dyet, recommended to them very urgently the ſending of the Troops that are wanted to the Rhine, becauſe 'tis likely the Enemy will endeavour to make Advantage of the preſent Opportunity to break into the Empire, the rather becauſe the French are already as numerous again as the Germans, and 'tis known that a Body of 12000 Men are ready at Metz, who 'tis probable now will march to the Upper-Rhine and not to the Netherlands.

Dreſden, April 24. Upon the News of the Emperour's Death the King of Poland cauſed a Council to be held, touching the Vicarſhip of the Empire belonging to the Electorſhip of Saxony; and the Golden-Bull, as alſo the Archives relating to the Methods of Proceeding in this Caſe, were inſpected. Which done, 12 Expreſſes were diſpatched to divers Courts. The King our Elector has reſolved not to go to Poland in the preſent Juncture, but to ſtay in the Empire till a new Emperour be choſen; at which the Poliſh Chancellour Szembeck is diſſatisfied, and has proteſted againſt it.

Berlin, April 25. The News of the Emperour's Death, has haſten'd the King of Pruſſia's Return from his Seat at Neuendorf hither. Whether this Accident will change the Reſolution his Majeſty had taken to make a Journey the next Month to Holland is yet uncertain.

Francfort, April 26. On Thurſday laſt Prince Eugene paſs'd by Water from hence to Mentz, where he arriv'd between 8 and 9 in the Morning. He immediately went to the Caſtle, and was continually with the Elector till 6 in the Evening; when he paſs'd the Mayn at Caſtheim, and rid to Bruchſal in Order to view the Lines of Etlingen, &c.

Landau, April 25. On Friday Prince Eugene of Savoy came to the Head Quarter of General de la Tour. His Highneſs view'd the Lines, which are in a bad Condition, and want to be repaired.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated May 1.

Letters from Cologne of the 28th of April, ſay Prince Eugene was expected there Yeſterday or to Day, after having conferr'd in his Paſſage with the Elector of Trier; that he was likewiſe to have an Interview with the Elector Palatine at Duſſeldorp; and that 'twas rumour'd the Elector Palatine will go to the Court of Vienna, there to Govern as Vicar of the Empire during the Interregnum. There are Advices, that General Count Gronſvelt, who was coming from Vienna to command the Army of the Empire on the Upper Rhine, died ſuddenly by the Way.

Paris, April 27. The King has receiv'd Advice, that the Emperour died the 17th Inſtant: The Ambaſſador of Spain immediately diſpatch'd a Courier, to carry this News to his Catholick Majeſty.

The King's Letter to the Cardinal de Noailles Archbiſhop of Paris, to order Prayers for the Repoſe of the Dauphin's Soul.

Couſin,
